

Since the inception of the NJ Do Not Call list and the invention of the Telezapper, I have been able to eat entire meals without interruption, have not been awakened from a sound sleep, and have noted a serious decline in my desire to rip the phone from the wall. To gut this Act would be akin to telling residents (and VOTERS) like me to go stuff it, that our time and stress levels are of no importance compared to the vitally important issue of allowing otherwise unemployable idiots the right to earn their $5 per call at our expense. How can you even consider doing that?
